What Bill has is a presentation folder with a special edition of the National Intelligence Daily. Each of you may pick up a copy of this edition after the festivities are over.

By intentional coincidence the front page of this edition of the Daily contains an article which recounts the birth of this land-mark intelligence publication. Let me read parts of this article.

This edition also contains a late item on the back page. Late items are not unusual... It reads in its entirety as follows:

Bill on behalf of all of your friends in the Directorate of Intelligence, let me wish you the very best. Truly we shall miss you.
